

The second edition of the best-selling Australian title, Teachers as Architects of Learning is a 'must have' book for any educator who is looking to improve their own teaching practice or is in the business of developing others. This edition supports teachers to develop innovative approaches and use high impact strategies in their efforts to apply deliberate practice to their teaching.

The book enables teachers to develop their own blueprint for teaching through the exploration of 12 learning constructs and 100 strategies. The 12 constructs outlined in the book develop teaching practice in the specific areas of questioning, self-assessment and feedback, observing and listening, explicit instruction, modelling and exemplars, support and safety, the use of time, setting expectations, connecting to student lifeworlds, desire to learn, resources and existing knowledge.

The insights the reader makes assists them in identifying underpinning beliefs that impact their behaviours as their teaching architecture evolves. The premise that beliefs influence behaviours is at the heart of Teachers as Architects of Learning.

Teachers as Architects of Learning assists teachers to activate successful student learning through developing as reflective practitioners. This book is a breath of fresh air in enabling teachers to take charge of their own professional learning journeys.
