Professional Learning Communities At Work™

A Twilight Session with Dr Terri Martin

Terri Martin is currently in Australia to work exclusively with HBPLS and Australia's first Professional Learning Community Schools. Terri will deliver a keynote presentation introducing Professional Learning Communities and how PLCs can create sustained, substantial improvement in your school.

Leading a Collaborative Culture: The Power of PLCs

This session will focus on the key components necessary for leading a Professional Learning Community. It will assist with understanding what to look for in a learning vs. teaching community.

Terri Martin, EdD, has been a part of professional learning communities at the building, district, and state levels. Dr. Martin draws from a rich background to connect with teachers and administrators. She was a professional development coordinator for PLCs in the state of Missouri and director of school-improvement initiatives at the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, working with many of the 524 districts as they embedded the PLC at Work™ process in their schools. She has been a classroom teacher, assistant principal, and principal in public schools in Columbia, Missouri. As principal, she led her schools to state recognition for continuous improvement and high performance.

A respected speaker, Dr Martin became a trainer for the strategies in the book The School Portfolio: A Comprehensive Framework for School Improvement by Victoria L. Bernhardt and received an award for her efforts from the state of Missouri in 2002. She wrote a case study about one of her schools, which was published in Dr Bernhardt's book The School Portfolio Toolkit. Dr Martin is author of several articles and the book Improving Student Achievement: An Educational Leader's Guide to a Purposeful School. Dr Martin is also a contributor to the anthology The Collaborative Administrator: Working Together as a Professional Learning Community.
