The Power of the Social Brain: Teaching, Learning, and Interdependent Thinking

Arthur Costa, Pat O'Leary • 9781760010669

Research has demonstrated that cooperative learning is one of the most highly effective teaching strategies, while new findings from neuroscience confirm the brain's natural inclination to think socially. But simply putting students in a group is not enough. Arthur Costa sees "interdependent thinking" as the missing piece of the collaborative puzzle. This authoritative book provides practical strategies informed by research from neuroscience and education to help groups function more effectively and thoughtfully. By adding the "cognitive dimension" to cooperative learning, this book will help readers apply new protocols and strategies for more affirming and productive group work in classrooms and professional educational learning communities.

A Parent's Guide to Online Safety

Marje Monroe, Doug Fodeman • 9781760011901

Try to keep up with today's technology can be overwhelming. You probably feel like you'll never understand the technology your child is using, especially when it seems to change every six months. What's a parent to do? Take a deep breath! Yes, the technology keeps changing, but the kids themselves stay pretty much the same. Much of what they do is not about the technology they are using. It's about seeking attention, forming and sustaining relationships, taking risks and having fun. Parents have been dealing with these behaviours for centuries. This revised Australian edition will help you identify the digital citizenship topics all parents should be aware of while providing advice on setting limits for your child.
