Key Selling Points:

- Loaded with practical advice and tips for experienced and aspiring teacher leaders
- Written by one of education's foremost consultants and authors

Summary:

One of education's foremost consultants and authors lays out the foundation that every school needs for developing and supporting highly committed teacher leaders.

She explains:

- why there is a difference between those excellent teachers who are leaders and those excellent teachers who are not
- which skills and dispositions are key to successful teacher leaders
- how to ensure teacher leaders reinforce the mission and goals of your school
- what kind of culture, policies and structures schools need to encourage teacher leadership
- where and when it's critical for teacher leaders to interact with the community outside your school

Teachers seeking to expand their leadership capacity will learn how to:

- recognise an opportunity and take initiative
- mobilise colleagues around a common purpose
- marshal resources and take action
- monitor and adjust the initiative
- sustain the commitments of others
- contribute to the learning organisation
