Summary:

The Art and Science of teaching video series brings Robert Marzano's comprehensive framework to life. In part one, Marzano guides viewers through classroom examples of effective management strategies, including: engaging students; establishing and maintaining rules and procedures; creating and maintaining effective relationships with students; and communicating high expectations for all students. Marzano explains the rationale for each of these strategies, and classroom scenes show how teachers artfully combine these strategies with effective instruction and curriculum design to produce better student learning. A professional development plan with a PowerPoint presentation and teacher handouts is included.
