Summary:

The Brigance Employability Inventory of Essential Skills contains many criterion-referenced assessments that provide opportunity to evaluate the reading, writing, speaking, listening, comprehending and computing skills needed when seeking employment. It is of great value in assessing job-seeking and employability skills, especially programs using curriculum-based instruction and specialising in job training and placement. The Inventory gives specific feedback on curriculum needs, allowing instructors and learners to plan, monitor and assess individual learning growth. The Inventory comes with an individual record-keeping system, the Learner Record Book, which enables progress to be recorded in a simple format that allows easy tracking of assessment dates and results.
