Summary:

When schools, families and communities share responsibility for students' education, they can make a positive impact on student achievement. Based on 25 years' research, this comprehensive third edition of School, Family, and Community Partnerships details a framework that enables school, regional and state leaders to develop effective programs for family and community involvement. Learn how to create Action Teams for Partnerships and train team members in planning and implementing partnership activities. Discover how teams can mobilise community resources, reach families, evaluate program results, and improve plans and practices over time. A proven approach to implementing and sustaining inclusive, goal-oriented programs.
