Summary:

This application-oriented text is an invaluable resource for student teachers, new teachers and highly experienced teachers of Primary, Middle Years and Secondary School levels. The text guides teachers through differentiated instruction by illustrating the Chunk, Chew and Check framework which helps to set apart pathways for students of differing abilities to reach the same learning targets. The text provides detailed Teacher Learning Targets, and shows how to reach these targets through detailed instruction and lesson ideas for both tiered and whole group instruction. It also offers intelligence and interest surveys so you can find out how each student learns best and begin to go about catering to individual learning needs. The text also includes assessment examples and extensive lesson planning templates.

Chunk (input) illustrates the concept of using different ways of inputting new information into learning brains. Some children may need to process information in smaller chunks, or using different mediums than others.

Chew concentrates on the different ways for learners to process new information. Teachers need to offer students a variety of ways to chew on new information they have presented to students.

Check is about understanding the different ways learners can show (or output) what they have learned.
