Summary:

Improving thinking in the classroom does not have to be difficult. This title, Improving Thinking in the Classroom, provides teachers with useful and practical strategies that will enable them to offer all their students the most engaging, exciting and challenging learning environment they can. Topics include building depth and rigor using Bloom's taxonomy, engaging students with Multiple Intelligences, and transferring knowledge to the real world.

Key selling points:

- Combines strengths of two key thinking strategies, Bloom's taxonomy and Multiple Intelligences, to create twice as many activities that will engage children as they learn.
- Provides a matrix for teachers to easily implement the programs suggested.
- Includes questionnaires to help teachers discover how each individual child learns best.
