Summary:

While presenting workshops for teachers and parents in Australia, New Zealand and America, Carolyn Coil realised the great need to provide educators with simple tools to apply new educational research in the classroom. Written specifically for New Zealand teachers, Carolyn's new book provides a range of lesson plans and activities that use a broad number of learning modalities and styles, whilst keeping the needs of 21st century students and teachers in mind.

Tools for Teaching and Learning in the Integrated Classroom is an important resource as it helps educators understand the new theories and incorporate various teaching strategies in their own classrooms.

Key selling points:

- Addresses Multiple Intelligences, Bloom's taxonomy and different learning styles.
- Encourages parent-teacher collaboration and provides tips and examples for successful and productive interaction.
- Includes sample learning encounters based on New Zealand themes, as well as assessment criteria and rubrics.

Supporting resources:

- Teacher's Toolbox: Integrating Instruction & Units for Society and Environment (4033)
- Student Engagement: Strategies to Raise Achievement (4174)
- Surviving the Middle Years (HB6153)
- Becoming an Achiever: A Student Guide (HB6339)
- Motivating Underachievers (HB6320)
