Summary

Research has made it clear that differentiated instruction is vital to the success of today's learners. Teachers must have an understanding of learning modalities and multiple intelligences to create lessons that engage and encourage all learners.

Today's administrators must recognise that every school also has staff members with diverse learning styles, intelligences, motivations, skill levels and interests. Differentiated Leadership uses the knowledge of brain-compatible learning and applies the principles to the staff, as well as to the students.

Differentiated Leadership is about creating systems in the school that motivate and actively engage all of the stakeholders. Individuals in educational leadership positions at any level are faced with incredible challenges every day. This book provides practical strategies that will maximise a school's potential and make it a positive learning community. Learn how to plan for change that will get the desired results without any of the unintended consequences. Transform staff antagonists into positive contributors. With Differentiated Leadership you'll have just the right tools to motivate and energise every member of your staff.
