

“That jacket looks really good on you,”
said the shop assistant.

Kevin turned from side to side
looking at himself in the long mirror.
He loved the jacket.
It would go well with his shirt and jeans.

‘Yes,’ he thought,
‘I’ll have to have this.’

“I’ll put it on lay-by,” said Kevin,
handing the jacket to the shop assistant.
“How much do you want for the deposit?”

“We’ll need 10% of the price on the ticket.
Then you’ll have six weeks to pay it off,”
The shop assistant pointed to the sign behind the counter.

“Now let me take down the details. . .
Name?. . . Address?. . .”
