

Leadership Coaching for Educators

Bringing Out the Best in School Administrators

Second Edition

Karla Reiss

© Hawker Brownlow Education

Contents

List of Figures	ix
Preface	x
Purpose	xi
Coaching Defined	xiii
About the Contents	xiv
What's New in the Second Edition	xv
Features and Benefits	xvi
How I Came to Coaching	xvii
Author's Notes	xix
Acknowledgments	xx
About the Author	xxiii
PART I: MAKING A CASE FOR LEADERSHIP COACHING	1
Introduction	1
1. Why Coaching? Why Now?	5
Coaching Defined	6
Coaching: A Booming Profession	9
What's the Payoff?	10
The Cost of Not Coaching	12
The Impact of Coaching on the Business Environment	14
Coaching Benefits	16
Coaching: A Global Study of Successful Practices	17
Sherpa 2013 Executive Coaching Survey	19
The Need for Leadership Coaching in Education	21
New Evaluation Systems and Leader Turnover Spark Need for Coaching Competence	23

Executive Coaching for School Leaders:
An Important Strategy	26
Coaching Expands in Education	28
ICF International Prism Award Goes to a K–12 School	28
2013 ICF International Prism Award:
Honorable Mention	30
Colorado Association of School
Executives Leadership Coaching Program	31
Great Work Alliance	32
Wisconsin Association of School District Administrators’
(WASDA) Executive Coaching Program	34
Georgia School Superintendents Association	35
National Association of Elementary School
Principals (NAESP)	35
Recent Coaching Research in Education	35
Coaching: A Strategy for Achieving Peak Performance	43
Coaching: It’s All About Change	44
Emotional Intelligence and Coaching	45
Summary	47
PART II: COACHING MINDSETS AND SKILL SETS	49
2. Getting Started as a Coach	51
Differentiating Leadership Coaching
From Instructional Coaching	53
Developing a Coaching Mindset	55
Coaching Mindset Attributes	56
Active Listener	57
Nonjudgmental	57
Possibility Thinker	57
Compassionate	58
Inspirational	58
Personable	58
Intuitive	58
Sincere	59
Trustworthy	59
Risk Taker	59
Action Oriented	60
Focused on Results	60
Knows Core Coaching Competencies	60
Curious	61
Consider the Coachee	62
The Eager and Enthused	63
The Reluctant and Resistant	63

Different Reasons to Coach	65
Coaching to Increase or Gain Skills	66
Coaching to Improve
Professional Performance	67
Coaching for Enhanced Professional
Growth and Development	70
Coaching for Organizational Improvement	72
Life Coaching	72
Coaching the Whole Person	73
Connecting Outer Goals With the Inner Self	76
Values Matter	78
Empowering Others for Success	80
Professional Organizations	81
Core Competencies: Implications for Educators	82
Summary	82
3. Core Coaching Competencies 1–4	84
Core Coaching Competencies	86
Setting the Foundation	87
Core Competency 1: Meeting Ethical
Guidelines and Professional Standards	87
Core Competency 2: Establishing a
Coaching Agreement	94
Co-creating the Relationship	96
Core Competency 3: A Coach Establishes Trust and
Intimacy With the Coachee	98
Core Competency 4: Coaching Presence	104
Summary	108
4. Core Coaching Competencies 5–7	109
Communicating Effectively	109
Core Competency 5: Active Listening	110
Core Competency 6: Powerful Questioning	124
Core Competency 7: Direct Communication	130
Summary	134
5. Core Coaching Competencies 8–11	135
Facilitating Learning and Results	135
Core Competency 8: Creating Awareness	136
Core Competency 9: Designing Actions	144
Core Competency 10: Planning and Goal Setting	152
Core Competency 11: Managing Progress and
Accountability	155
Summary	160

PART III: ENSURING SUCCESS THROUGH COACHING	161
6. Strategies to Break Through Resistance	163
Conquering Resistance	166
Limiting Beliefs	168
Assumptions	170
Fear	172
Judgments	175
Interpretations	176
External Obstacles	177
Changing Individuals, Changing Systems	178
Abandoning the Comfort Zone	179
The Comfort Zone	180
The Discomfort Zone	180
The “Anything’s Possible” Zone	181
Three Stages of Transition	184
Ending	184
Neutral	185
New Beginning	185
The Four Laws of Change	185
Change Comes From Within	185
Permanent Change Requires a Vision	186
A Great Learning Must Occur	186
A Healing Forest Must Be Present	187
Possibility Thinking	188
Becoming a Possibility Thinker	189
Visioning a New Future	191
Peak Performance Strategies	193
Affirmations	194
Being Present	194
Visualization	195
The Language of Change	196
Summary	199
7. Powerful Coaching in Action	200
The POWERful Coaching Framework™	201
What Is the POWERful Coaching Framework™?	202
Phases of a Coaching Relationship	206
The Start-Moving Phase	206
The Keep-Moving Phase	207
The Renewal Phase	208
Aligning Goals and Actions for Extraordinary Results: Setting Goals	209

Values Clarification	210
Identifying Goals	213
Aligning Goals and Actions for Extraordinary Results:
Developing a Professional Coaching Plan	215
Step 1: Exploring	215
Step 2: Defining and Committing	217
Step 3: Action Planning	218
Step 4: Interim Communication	223
Step 5: Continuation	223
Using Assessments in Coaching	223
Identifying Strengths and Opportunities	224
Self-Assessment	225
Published Assessment Tools	226
Midpoint Assessment	226
Final Assessment	227
Summary	228
8. Implementing Successful Coaching	230
Creating Conditions for Success	231
Policies and Decision Making	233
Communication Flow	234
Selecting and Training Coaches	236
Selecting Internal Coaches	237
Selecting External Coaches	238
Training Coaches	238
Executive and Leadership Coaching	242
On-Site Coaching	244
Telephone Coaching	244
A Coaching Approach to Continuous School System Improvement	245
Creating a Whole-School Coaching Strategy	245
Summary	247
Conclusion	249
Resources	253
Resource A: Attributes of a Great Coach: Self-Assessment	254
Resource B: Coachee Readiness Checklist	256
Resource C: International Coach Federation Professional Coaching Core Competencies	257
Resource D: International Coach Federation Code of Ethics	263

Resource E: What's the Difference?	268
Resource F: Examining Limiting Beliefs	270
Resource G: The POWERful Coaching Framework™: Conducting a POWERful Coaching Session	272
Resource H: Professional Coaching Plan: Quarterly Goals and Initial Actions	274
Resource I: Coaching Session Action Planner	275
Resource J: Useful Assessment Tools to Use in Coaching	276
Resource K: Successful Coaching Implementation Checklist	278
References	279

© Hawker Brownlow Education

PART I

Making a Case for Leadership Coaching

Introduction

Impossible is a word to be found only in the dictionary of fools.

—Napoleon Bonaparte

The first time I offered complimentary executive coaching sessions at a conference for school administrators, I was stunned to discover that by 8:00 a.m., my schedule was fully booked for the day. I was the last person to leave the conference. Every person entered the session with a challenge he or she was facing on the job and left thirty minutes later with actions to take the next day. Everyone thought, initially, I would tell them what to do to remedy their problem. Every administrator quickly learned that coaching is a collaborative discovery process. Each one left the session feeling positive, more confident, and empowered to solve his or her problem.

Welcome to the powerful world of coaching! If you are reading this book, it is likely you have begun the quest to know more about coaching, to determine how to bring coaching into your school, district, or university. This book will provide you with what you need to know to get started planning and implementing a successful program. I believe that coaching, done well by skilled coaches, holds enormous promise for creating ongoing, continuous improvement of all aspects of the education system—for creating lasting change . . . at last.

It can be very tempting to jump on the bandwagon and start a coaching program in your school or district. It's well worth doing. Coaching is a hot, new field and a buzzword that is used more and more often to describe a role that is often not coaching. As you take the trip down the coaching road, my advice is to "walk, don't run"; "proceed with caution"; and take time to learn about the role, the process, and the coaching relationship. Take time to discuss and reach mutual understanding with your colleagues about how coaching differs from other helping roles. Before you implement yet another new thing, learn about the role of coaches and the skills, techniques and processes that professional coaches use. Learn about coaching's potential for changing thoughts, beliefs, and minds and touching the essence of who we are as human beings. I believe coaching is the missing ingredient from our school improvement efforts, and when a well-designed coaching program is successfully implemented, school systems, staff, and students will soar.

There are many compelling reasons for the coaching process to find its way into the boardroom, the principal's office, and elsewhere throughout a school system, as well as in the classroom. Coaching as a strategy to reform schools is still in its infancy. We have yet to fully appreciate its [Coaching is] the heart of management, not at the edges. Coaching is everything you do to produce extraordinary results amid change, complexity, and competition. Coaching is everything you do to improve your strategic thinking about the future you want to create. Coaching is everything you do to ignite personal and team learning in solving organizational problems while building the capability you need to succeed. Coaching is everything you do to give you and your entire organization an edge and advantage. You don't need coaching for ordinary results.

—Robert Hargrove (2000, p. 83)

potential for strengthening schools and boosting the performance of school leaders responsible for the high levels of achievement of others in a demanding, complex environment. We have a long way to go, and my hope is that this book will provide the basic knowledge educators need about coaching to design and develop successful programs.

I see a future for coaching as a continuous improvement process that will penetrate the system far beyond its current use. I see districts where

- All leaders utilize coaching skill in staff evaluations
- All leaders have access to receive coaching from a trained professional coach
- Every educator has clear professional goals and a coaching plan to achieve them
- Every educator is taking daily actions to achieve his or her goals
- Every school and central office has access to high-quality professional-coach training
- Every district has well-trained coaches available to coach others
- School leaders incorporate a coaching approach for more effective communication with colleagues, board members, and staff
- Principals have and use coaching skills with teachers, especially in the evaluation process
- Teachers are skilled in coaching students to empower their learning

Executive coaches are not for the meek. They're for people who value unambiguous feedback. All coaches have one thing in common: it's that they are ruthlessly results oriented.

—Anonymous

All school leaders deserve access to a coaching relationship and benefit from learning coaching skills and techniques to enhance interpersonal communication throughout their school systems. I have great hopes for coaching and its yet untapped potential for creating successful school change and hope that throughout the course of the book, you, the reader, will discover some of the potential coaching has for effective and lasting school change.